Associate Attorney – Utility Regulation

Lloyd Gosselink Rochelle & Townsend, a downtown Austin law firm established in 1984, seeks an Associate Attorney for its busy and complex electric, gas and water utility practice. The Firm actively advocates and represents public and private sector entities throughout Texas before the Public Utility Commission (PUC), the Railroad Commission of Texas (RCT), the State Office of Administrative Hearings (SOAH) and at all levels of state and federal court systems. The Firm's focus is on utility regulation, administrative law and matters of significant policy and regulatory importance.

The ideal candidate will be a team player with solid academic credentials, be licensed to practice in Texas, and has 0-5 years of experience in administrative law, preferably in electric, gas, water regulation. Additionally, experience with compliance, licensing and franchise issues, utility ratemaking, service and contracts, and aggregation of electric customers is preferred.

This is an excellent opportunity for those looking to hone their technical skills while receiving training and mentorship from partners with extensive experience. Lloyd Gosselink has many long-term clients, and the Firm is committed to developing attorneys to serve those clients and lead the Firm in the coming years.

Lloyd Gosselink offers a competitive salary and a comprehensive total rewards package including medical, dental, vision insurance coverage; short-term disability; employer-funded long-term disability and long-term care; a 401(k) plan with employer contribution; paid parking in downtown Austin; cell reimbursement, PTO, holiday and incentive pay; paid parental leave; and an Employee Assistance Program.

Lloyd Gosselink supports diversity and is an equal opportunity employer.
